

ENCAMPMENT

ILLUMINATIONS.

Here is another suggestion which the When offers to some one who can secure an electric current or possesses a system of sufficient capacity for the purpose. The G. A. R. badge is a very simple design for illuminating purposes, and may be made effective by using a system of cut-outs, which will produce the effect of making the flag wave and the stars twinkle. To be imposing it should be from thirty to forty feet high. The main bony of the device should be constructed of wood, which is in itself an insulator, thus making it comparatively safe. The eagle at the top of the badge should be set in clear incandescent globes, the flag stripes in red and white, the field with clear globes, representing the stors, which, with the cut-outs referred to, can be made to twinkle. The points of the stars at the bottom of the badge should be set with clear globes, while the center should be composed of a transparency showing the figures, as in the accompanying illustration. This design, without the mechanical effects, is very simple and easy, and can be made without possessing an electrical

REV. JAY IN DISGRACE.

Caught in the Act of Stealing He Confesses and Then Flees from Home.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. NEW CASTLE, Ind., Aug. 4.-Until a few days ago, Rev. Issiah Jay was an honored minister of the Society of Friends, but now he is a fugitive from this place and his friends are in mourning. Mr. Jay has been a resident of this city for several years, during which time he held the esteem of the community. Two years ago he suffered many weeks from a severe attack of the grip, and, since then, has not been preaching regularly, but has earned a livelihood by selling books. He has been in the habit of going into Kerr & Harvey's grocery, and doing his writing at the desk, behind which was kept the safe of the Adams Express Company. For several weeks prior to June various sums of money had been missed from the safe, and finally a trap was set for the thief, who was believed to be Mr. Jay. On the date mentioned he was caught in the act of taking a ten-dollar bill from the safe. He confessed, and stated that he had taken, at various times, $140. This amount he made good, and the matter would not have leaked out but for the fact that a note which he gave at one of the banks to secure the money to make good his peculations fell due last week, and the indorsers made things so lively for him that he broke down and confessed the whole matter. Quakers in and about this city were indorsers for him at both banks, and will have several hundred dollars to pay. He turned over his residence to them, and they will not lose much. Other shady transactions have come to light since this expose. It was discovered that he was in the habit of going to stores and buying goods with the usual 10 per cent. discount allowed to ministers, having them charged to himself, and turning them over to his friends for the cash. No excuse is offered for his stealings. He says he was not needing money, and can think of no reason why he took it. His friends attribute it to mental aberration, the result of grip. He has disappeared from this city, and his whereabouts are unknown. His estimable wife and family are heartbroken, and have the sincere sympathy of the entire community.

IN FAVOR WITH HOKE.

Pension Office Rule Suspended to Let Young Dr. Crampton Sorve.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. DELPHI, Ind., Aug. 4.—It can be set down that Hoke Smith is ever ready to do a favor for a political friend, regardless of preboard was announced, two weeks ago, it was seen to be made up of Dra. Crampton, Scholl and Conway, of this county, all reliable Democrate. It was announced here at once that Dr. Crampten was not eligible, he having graduated from medical college less than two months ago, and there being a rule in the Pension Department to apan actual experience of five years in the practice. Mr. A. B. Crampton, father of young Dr. Crampton, learned of the barrier, and quietly packing his grip he slipped away to Washington. He laid the matter before Hoke Smith, and Hoke suspended the rule in favor of young Crampton and had his papers made out at once. The appouncement that the Secretary of the Interior had fixed the matter up was a great shock to a number of Demoeratic physicians in this county who had arranged to take Crampton's place on the board. It will be seen that pension boards are to be made a matter of politics entirely. Mr. A. B. Crampton. who had this rule abrogated, was chairman of the Democratic committee in this congressional district a number of years ago. was postmaster here under Cleveland four years ago, and is now editing a Democratic paper. The oldest man on the Delphi board Dr. Scholl, and he will be elected its president. He is the only soldier on the board, having served in the rebel army through the entire war.

MUST STAND THE LOSS.

An Act of the Legislature Procured by Fraud Cannot Benefit Mr. Johnson.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. WINCHESTER, Ind., Aug. 4.-Judge Monks, of the Circuit Court, has decided a legal question that is of interest to the profession and officers who shall hereafter look to the Legislature for relief from losses. The court held that an act of the Legislature, procured by frand, for the relief of an officer losing trust funds, was void. The Legislature of 1891 passed an set relieving Isase V. D. R. Johnson, extreasurer of this county, from the payment of $2,000, lost by him by the failure of the banking house of C. L. Lewis & Co. The preamble of the act recites that Johnson's predecessor had on deposit with Lewis & Co. over $15,000 of the trust funds of the county; that when he retired he turned over to Johnson this $16,000; that he Johnson) drew on this, from time to time, until | ship, was instantly killed, while unloading there remained but $3,000; that the bank failed, and Johnson received but $1,000 in dividends, and that a large number of the taxpayers of the county petitioned the Legislature for the relief of Mr. Johnson. On the trial of the case the evidence showed, and the court so found, that all the statements in the preamble of the act were false. The evidence showed that Turner had no money in the Lewis bank, but that Johnson took the checks on other banks and deposited them with Lewis; that he checked out all this and then loaned Lewis & Co. $3,000, taking a certifisats of denosit drawing 6 per cent, interest: that the $2,000, from the payment of which the act in question was intended to relieve him, was a part of the said $3,000, so loaned Lewis & Co. The evidence showed that during the time Mr. Johnson's petitions were in the hands of his friends and being circulated considerable opposition arose, and thereupon Johnson published a card withdrawing his petitions and annonneing that he abandoned the idea of asking for relief. He afterwards permitted these petitions to be surreptitionaly presented to the General Assembly, and the act was passed. The evidence further showed that after Lewis & Co. made the assignment the matter was compromised and settled. All the claims against Lewis, including Johnson's certificate of deposit, were assigned to Lewis's wife, and Johnson thereby released Lewis, and at the time of the passage of the act Johnson had no legal demand against Lewis & Co. On these facts the court found that the passage of the act was procured by fraud and misrepresentation and that such an act could not be enforced for the benefit of the party who thus procured its passage.

STORY OF 1,000 BUSHELS OF WHEAT, Or How Two Good Democrats Have Found Out They Were Duped.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal Kokomo, Ind., Aug. 4.-Two years ago John H. Hardebeck and George Keyton, two well-to-do farmers near this place, and both Democrats, raised a large wheat crop. The market price here at that time was 98 cents per bushel. They had set their heads on getting $1, and stored one thousand bushels each in the elevators here, for which they agreed to pay 1 cent per bushel per month storage. Later wheat touched the dollar mark, but then they wanted enough more to pay the storage, and last fall, relying on the Democratic promises of $1.25 for wheat if Cleveland should be elected, they again declined to sell. This week the best wheat sold on our streets for 45 cents. Should Messra, Hardebeck and Keyton sell now they would, after allowing for storage and shrinkage, receive a little over 15 cents per bushel for their grain in the place of $1.25 as promised in the event of Democratic

The Sullivan Gang Turns the Democratic Convention Into a Bediam.

The Machine Nominates Five Candidates and the Convention Becomes So Dangerous an Adjournment Has to Be Taken.

The following are the five men nominated for councilmen at large last night by the most turbulent and riotous Democratic convention ever held in this city: MARTINJ MURPHY, E. M. GOEBEL, HENRY HABENEY, FRED. SCHRADER. DAN MONINGER.

At an early hour this morning the convention had to adjourn because it threatened to assume the proportions of a dangerous riot.

When Noah Webster published his Unabridged Dictionary he failed to put in it any word or combination of words adequate to describe the Democratic convention which was held last night at the Hendricks Club Hall. The convention assembled for the purpose of nominating six councilmen at large, the second time. "Expert accountants" were conceded to be responsible for the failure of the nominees of the first convention to stick. At any rate, so great a howl was raised within the ranks of the Democratic party that the six gentlemen said "being men of honor, we cannot accept a nomination coming to us in that way."

So they resigned, and another convention was called. It assembled last night, and ah like ones of this party of broils and tally-sheet forgeries pale into insignificance beside it.

Before it was called to order, and the delegates were "moistening up" down stairs, a drunken individual lurched up to Superintendent Colbert, who was standing on the walk, and insisted on embracing | posed to have it.

"You'd better go upstairs," quoth the chief of police in plain disgust. "Or will," hiccoughed the man, "and Oi'll holler, an' Oi'll be in Ivery mix there is, you can jist bet that." And he was, and there were hundreds just like him. It was the gang's convention all the way through. Everything the gang wanted went. It began with the selection of chairman. Those who may be termed the "anti-gang" wanted Jim Keach for chairman, and he was placed in nomination by them. Now the gang, with Thomas Taggart at its head, looked on this with disfavor. Taggart husttled out on to the floor, and got some one to nominate William A. Peelle, jr., and another man to move that the nominations close. Before the latter could get in his work a man from the rear of the hall had neminated Sterling R. Holt. The convention yelled for Keach, but some unknown influence got hold of him and he declined. It was learned that Holt was not in the city, and Peells went in by acclamation. A small-sized breeze was started when nominations for secretary were called for. The anti-gang did not propose to have any more tampering with the tally sheets, and they watched with closeness every name that was presented. The following were selected: Jim Wilson, Charles Faulkner, Leo Fitzpatrick and John Hartman. Wm. Armstrong was afterwards selected to announce the vote from the floor. The men upon the floor made no effort to keep order. They ran from one place to another, emitting ear-splitting yells, and declaring that they were good "limmycrats," and that there "ain't nobody goin' to head us off.

Chairman Peelle's gavel failed. He has a pretty able pair of lungs, but it was like yelling in the Cave of the Winds. Finally, with the assistance of Tom Taggert, he succeeded in getting it quiet enough to aunounce that the roll would be called by wards for nominations. It proceeded in a most disgraceful manner.

As many as a half dozen men would be on the floor at once trying to name their candidates, and each would have as many at their coat tails trying to stop them. Dozens of times the chairman called on the police to stop the noise, but there was nothing that they could do. They had standing instructions to deal gently, and for them to tell a man to sit down was worse than useless. Out of the turmoil the secretaries announced that the following men had been

E. M. Goeble, H. R. Tall, John B. McGuffin, William Hicklin, Daniel Monninger, John White, Henry Habeney, Martin Murphy, Frederick Schrader, John Higgins, Thomas Markey, Henry Laut, T. J. McMillian, Morris Healey and Henry Halloran. It was right in here that a bit of the gang's slick work came in. As had already been announced, the gang had a slate made up and Ed Scherrer, of the Fourth ward, was included in it. Some one had forgotten to nominate him and consternation resulted for a moment. The chairman hastily went over to the secretaries' desk and a moment later it was announced that Just then a wild-eyed man ran up to the stage and declared, shaking his fist under the chairman's nose, that John O'Day had been nominated and that he had been left This man was allowed to yell for all his lungs were worth, no attention being paid to him. A moment later the robust figure of Col. Bill Hicklin appeared on the stage and the Colonel asked to be heard. He "Every gentleman in the room will recognize me, and ___ " He was interrupted by a storm of yells and cat calls. "Those who sin't gentlemen won't recognize me," he shouted over the noise. Then ensued a scone which might be expected of the uncivilized only. Hisses, profane epithets and wild screeches prevailed for a period of fully five minutes' duration. Hicklin and the chairman called for order alike in vain. The chairman announced that unless order was restored the convention must adjourn. That had no effect. Tom Taggart got up and beseeched the delegates to be quiet. They hooted him until he was compelled to sit down. Jim Keach, Martin Murphy, Vio Backus, Charley Polster and dozens of others tried to induce Hicklin to sit down, but he was obdurate and refused to do so. He finally managed to say that he believed it to be to the interest of the party that all men withdraw except the six who had been nominated before, and the statement came near causing a riot. Men climbed over each other to get to the stage. Jim Keach and A. J. Connety were only prevented from coming to blows by the intervention of Captain Quigley. This state of affairs existed for fully a quarter of an hour, and Hicklin, saying to himself that he had declined to run, left the

The chairman then appounced that the convention would proceed to bailot, after it had been voted that the six men receiving the majority of all the votes cast should be elected. The balloting proceeded in a reasonably quiet manner. Every now and then a precinct would try to cast more votes than it was allowed, and a howl of negatives would go up.

It took fully an hour and a half to call the roll of precincts, and then fully an hour longer to foot the sheets. Long before they had been finished the impatient delegates began to yell for a new set of secretaries. "Where's Ryan!" yelled one man. "Give us some people that can add," called another. The result was finally announced as fol-

During the summing up of the sheets the efforts of the police had been required to keep the crowd away from the tellers. Friends of the candidates had kept private accounts, and they were all anxious to see that they corresponded with the

Immediately after the close of the second ballot the gang made another effort to carry its slate through. William Duke, who holds the office of who holds the office of jan-itor of the courthouse under the county, secured the floor and moved that Mr. Scherrer be nominated by acclamaon the ballot, and Duke was howled down with derisive laughter.

The convention then proceeded to the second ballot, and it proceeded but slowly owing to the indescribable confusion that ensued. The delegates converted them-selves into a monkey and parrot show. A big crowd of them followed the teller around the hall, and in almost every precinct the police were compelled to settle difficulties that arose among them. A halfdozen encounters with lists were nipped in the bud by the officers. The result of the second ballot was as follows: Monninger, 3064; Laut, 298; Markey, 2714; Scherrer, 1814; Halloran, 78; Healey, 484; White, 324; Hickin, 2, and Tall, 1. There were 611 votes cast, and 306 were necessary to choice. Monninger was therefore the only man declared elected. Then followed the most senseless and unheard-of proceeding ever seen on the floor of a convention. Men made motions, and then turned and helped to defeat them. A. Schad repeatedly made a motion to adjourn, which he as often howled down. Billy Parkinson, Matt Quinn, John Reardon and dozens of others walked up and down the floor in front of the chairman, yelling and calling on him to proceed with the vote. One man rushed frantically up to the stage and stuck his list in the chairman's face, saying, with a sprinkling of the roughest of oaths, that he wanted justice, and that he pro-

INDIANAPOLIS NATIONAL'S AFFAIRS.

A Mortgage for $250,000 Given by the Indianapolis Cabinet Company.

Mr. Hawkins has telegraphed that he would leave Harbor Point, Mich., for this city immediately to take charge of the affairs of the Indianapolis National after his bond has been fixed by Controller Eckels. The law regulating the pay of receivers for national banks provides that it shall be an amount equal to the salary received by the cashier of the bank. This will make the salary of the receiver in this case $2,500 per annum. The real estate owned by Theodore P. Haughey, president of the bank, in this city and county is of the aggregate value of $11,200 free from incumbrance, and his personal property in the county amounts to $2,080. His wife, Hannah Haughey, has real estate in Washington township which is assessed at $14,000. It now appears that the Indianapolis Cabinet Company has filed a mortgage for $250,000, which is shown on the books of the recorder's office. In February there was recorded this mortgage to Theodore P. Haughey, trustee, covering all the property of the company in this city, Richmond, Ind., Boston, New York and London. The purpose of the loan, as given of record, was to increase the business of the company, and it was divided into bonds of $1,0.0, for the redemption of which at the expiration of ten years it is provided that the company should each year set aside a sinking fund of $15,000. These bonds are said to be on deposit with the bank. It is not known whether or not any of them have been disposed of. The cabinet company is assessed at $146,000. of which T. P.
